The Fourth of July is always a great day to celebrate our nation with friends, family & furry ones alike. While fireworks are a longstanding tradition for this summer holiday, for some pets, fireworks are not a reason to party, but a reason to panic. If your pet has a fear of or aversion to loud noises:

- ★ Something as simple as turning on some soft music and moving your pet into an interior room with no windows can be helpful.
- ★ An anxiety vest may work in some cases—if you don't have one, try a snugly fitting t-shirt.
- ★ Anti-anxiety medication might be your pet's best bet; call and set up an appointment with us to discuss your options before the Fourth of July festivities. We highly recommend contacting us sooner rather than later, for medication dosing and ensuring we find the best one for your pet.
- ★ While noise phobias are not as common in cats, they can and do happen. Fortunately, cats tend to hide when frightened. Checking in on your cats, having some quiet music on and keeping them indoors during the height of the fireworks is always a good idea.

A MARKET BUILT TO LAST

Like any market, real estate experiences periods of adjustment. But Ketchikan's housing market has consistently shown strength over time, supported by limited inventory, strong community roots, and the enduring appeal of life in Southeast Alaska. Whether you're buying your first home, searching for more space, downsizing, or preparing to sell, every move deserves thoughtful guidance. That's where the experienced team at Legacy Real Estate comes in. We help sellers position their homes for success and help buyers find the property that best fits their needs, goals, and budget. Whatever your next chapter looks like, we're here to help you move forward with confidence.
